Founder and CEO Jay Geier created the Scheduling Institute and its groundbreaking new-patient program more than 15 years ago. Today, the institute is much more than a new-patient company; it exists to grow private practices into thriving businesses that can either be kept for a lifetime of revenue or sold for maximum value.

After clients master new-patient training as a foundation for growth, the institute provides training and coaching for the entire practice in all areas that contribute to growth and profitability. In fact, the institute addresses and optimizes every aspect and role in the practice, including front desk, assistants, hygienists, team leaders, doctors and even their spouses.

Scheduling Institute programs address, at the right time, the five major areas that are critical to supporting sustainable growth: human capital, space and equipment, clinical duplication, marketing and finance. Given the depth and breadth of the institute's programs, it's no surprise it has elevated more private practices into the top 1% of all practices than any other management or consulting group. As a result, Scheduling Institute is recognized as the largest and most respected practice growth company in the world.
